FLORIDA STATE CONSTITUTION

*Article XIII
Section III
as Amended 1936*

THE respective counties of the State shall provide in the manner prescribed by law, for those of the inhabitants who, by reason of age, infirmity, or misfortune, may have claims upon the aid and sympathy of society; provided, however, the Legislature may by general law provide for a uniform State wide system for such benefits, and appropriate money therefor; but no such general law shall provide benefits to any person who shall not have been a resident of the State of Florida for a period of five years continuously next preceding his application therefor, nor shall such general law provide for benefits to any such person solely on account of age who has not attained the age of sixty-five years; provided, further that where by any law of the United States, a lesser or different period of residence, age or citizenship shall be fixed in order for the State of Florida to participate in any Federal grants that might be made for such purposes, the Legislature may prescribe such requirements as to citizenship, age, and residence as will be consistent with and not in conflict with such Federal law.

THE YEAR IN FLORIDA PUBLIC WELFARE

FOR the first time since the peak of wartime employment in 1944, there were at the close of the year just ending fewer Florida citizens receiving public assistance than at the beginning of the year.

In the State Department of Public Welfare office at the end of the year, there were 87,880 punched cards indicating that many persons were receiving assistance for 113,525 persons who were in need. At the beginning of the year, there were 97,326 cards for 133,475 persons.

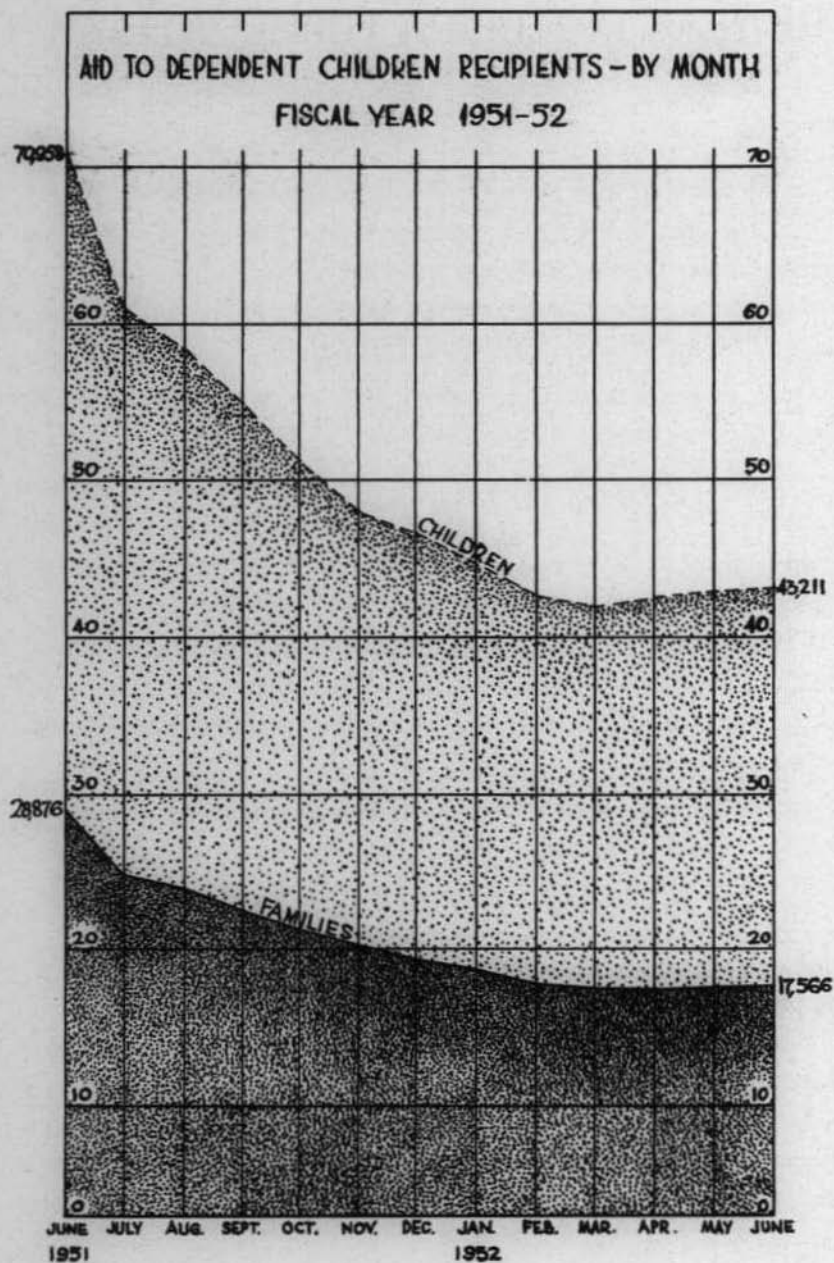

"Cards?" You ask. Yes, cards; but only for the mechanical processing which is an essential part of serving so many persons who are in need. There were no cards showing the many others who received services from the Department not directly connected with public assistance.

Back of those cards—out in the field where Welfare Board members, the Department and its staff come face to face with needy persons—are the heartaches, the desperation, which bring people to the Welfare Department for assistance.

Back of those cards, too, are stories of youngsters who, deprived of what one thinks of as normal living, have been helped so that they had food, shelter, clothing, and carry on with growing up.

MANY children for whom the State had been giving assistance through the Welfare Department were dropped from the assistance rolls early in the year. Funds for the Aid to Dependent Children program amounted to $11,613,850, as compared with $16,824,160 in the previous year. Standards for approving children for assistance were revised, new laws were put into effect, and the number of children getting assistance dropped this way:

Applications for needy children were received and studied by the Department, and the local Welfare Boards acted on them. Here is the action:

In July it was necessary to reduce grants to 56% of the "budgeted need" of dependent children who were in need of assistance. That had to be within the maximums—$27 for the first child, $18 for each additional one, and not more than $81 per month for any family group.

The minimum monthly budget and grant for a mother with four children often is like the above.

There had been enough "saving" by October so that grants were increased to 80% of the budgeted need, and in May it was possible to increase grants to 100%—but not to exceed the maximums.

AID TO DEPENDENT CHILDREN (FAMILY GROUP) AVERAGE MONTHLY PAYMENTS DECEMBER 1951

Average monthly grants for family groups with children in need were well below the national average, above some and below other Southern states.

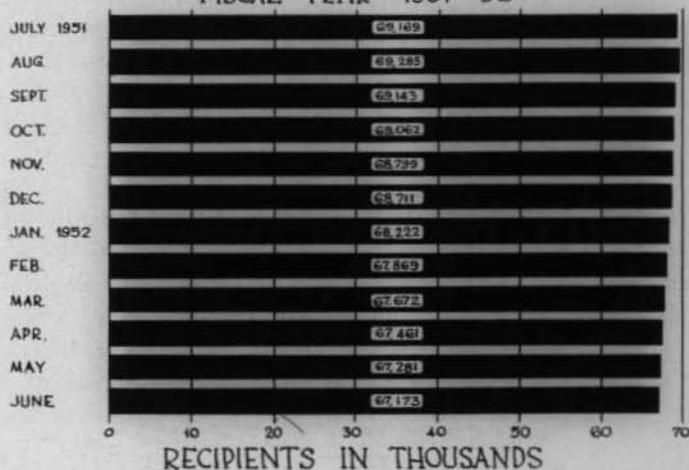

EFFECTS of the broadened Old Age and Survivors Insurance Program were felt during the year. They probably were the principal reason for the lower number of persons receiving Old Age Assistance. Many who formerly had turned to the Welfare Department for even minimum living found their "Social Security checks" increased to the point where they no longer were eligible for public assistance. For some it meant a reduction in assistance payments, as their retirement insurance increased.

Number of aged recipients declined during the year.

OLD AGE ASSISTANCE AVERAGE MONTHLY PAYMENTS

Average grants were below the national average, although above most Southern states.

THERE was a slight decrease in the number of needy blind receiving assistance in this year. Most gratifying was the fact that 69 had their sight restored to the extent that they were no longer technically blind and that 30 others were employed with sufficient income to no longer need assistance. Some, too, felt the effects of the expanded Old Age and Survivors Insurance Program.

There were fewer blind recipients at the end of the year than at the beginning.

AID TO THE BLIND AVERAGE MONTHLY PAYMENTS

DECEMBER 1951

The blind were helped, their average grant above most other Southern states, although below the national average.

These—Old Age Assistance, Aid to the Blind, and Aid to Dependent Children—are the three public assistance programs administered by the Department.

Florida has no state administered general assistance to meet the needs of those who do not fall within the limits of the three programs; neither does it have a program to provide assistance to the permanently and totally disabled. In the latter program, the Federal Government will match funds of the state on the same basis as for Old Age Assistance.

In May, 33 states were taking advantage of the Federal matching program to aid the permanently and totally disabled.

A CHART, graph, picture or words won't tell all about the needs of children and how some of them are being met through the Welfare Department. Neither will they tell about additional services needed for Florida's children.

In the past, it has been possible to help care for runaway children within the state with state funds. Effective in January of 1952, federal funds were made available to be used in returning Florida runaways from other states and to return to other states those in Florida.

The Department received for study and recommendations to the Court 1,634 adoption petitions and in many other instances the Courts asked for child welfare counseling.

Standards for child-caring and child-placing agencies and institutions are established by the Department, and at the end of the year 25 child-caring and child-placing agencies and institutions held licenses from the Department. In addition, 207 foster homes used by agencies were licensed, and in three counties (Dade, Duval and Orange) 200 day-care and boarding homes for children were licensed.

Many children need foster home care while their home situations are being adjusted or there are emergencies.

This year an average of 710 per month were in foster homes in 12 counties where this aid is available. The Department on a statewide basis provided emergency shelter care to many children. On June 30, 2,033 were receiving child welfare services. Details of the various services are shown on page 27.

Surplus food commodities were distributed. They come to Florida from the U. S. Department of Agriculture without any direct cost to the state, and are distributed through the State Welfare Department. This year 325,888 children in 1,225 schools had the benefits of this distribution, and 12,854 residents of 85 state and charitable institutions were served this food.

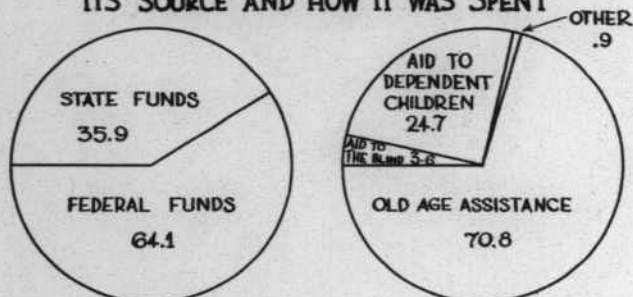

THE Florida Welfare Act requires the Department to study causes of dependence of the needy and to "encourage them to support themselves, if possible, and make and carry out plans for their permanent rehabilitation to the end that they may cease to be a charge upon the community whenever possible."

To fulfill that requirement would require more staff than the Department has been able to enlist with limited administrative and service appropriations.

THE PUBLIC ASSISTANCE DOLLAR

FISCAL YEAR 1951-52

ITS SOURCE AND HOW IT WAS SPENT

Tax funds with which the entire Florida Welfare Program are carried on come from two sources—the State and Federal governments. Here are the receipts from each source, and the way funds were expended. Costs of administering and servicing are allocated to each program. (In 12 counties, local governmental agencies and civic groups provide some funds for Child Welfare Services).

The Welfare Board approved for the year 969 positions in the Department, including clerical staff, janitors, division heads, and trained professional workers. Funds, however, were available for only 818 employees.

This meant that much of the rehabilitation work demanded by law had to go unaccomplished. Routine studies necessary in determining need alone consumed most of the time of the workers. Working with people, helping them better themselves, requires time and "know-how". With adequate staff, the Department could fulfill its obligation in this respect.

During the year 278 persons left the agency for various reasons, many of whom turned to other state agencies or private employment where salaries were more nearly in line with present living costs. Salary ceilings embodied in the Welfare Act have been in effect without change since 1947.

Welfare work requires experience.

A welfare worker is required to have a four-year college education, in most instances must have a car. Starting salary is $200 a month, below what is offered for similar training and requirements elsewhere. Other salaries are similarly out of line. The people of Florida lose money when there is a continuous turnover in Department personnel.

THE FIFTEEN YEARS

JUNE 30, 1952, marks the end of the fifteenth year in which Florida has had a statewide public assistance program administered through the State Welfare Board.

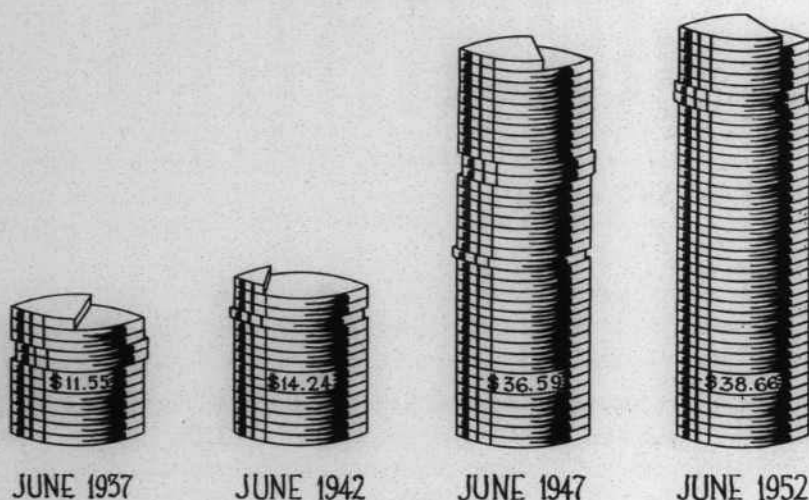

The State Welfare Board was created by legislative act in 1937, and the organization was set up July 1, 1937. Basically, the organizational and administrative structure has remained the same in these 15 years. In the intervening years, there have been a number of amendments to the Welfare Act.

Perhaps the most gratifying change through the years has been in the increased grants which the people of Florida through the Legislature and the Congress have made possible for the state's needy citizens and in providing funds with which to carry on some child welfare services.

In June, 1937, the average grant to a needy aged person was $11.55, in June, 1952, it was $38.66.

Average grants for the needy aged, dependent children, and blind, have increased in this way:

In these 15 years, Florida's population has increased from 1,700,000 to 2,900,000 (estimated).

The number of recipients in the three programs, Old Age Assistance, Aid to Dependent Children, and Aid to the Blind, has increased in this way:

BUT, perhaps, more important than that average grants have increased and that, with the passing years and more experience, the program has become more efficiently administered is the growing awareness that "we are our brother's keeper."

The people have agreed that through their Government's welfare program, equitably administered in all parts of the state, minimum assistance shall be provided those who are in need.

This is good business for a Democracy.
